DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

> (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

3. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

4. Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over JP 11-218691 (cited by applicant, herein '218) in view of Heller (US 5849486).

'218 teaches a droplet operation device comprising an insulating substrate (11) whose surface is subject to water repellent treatment, a unit (21,22,23, and 24) that supplies the droplet onto the surface of the substrate, and a unit (21, 52, 61, or 62) that measures a state of the droplet. '218 further teaches a unit (21, 52, 61, or 62) that optically and telescopically measures an internal state of the droplet and a unit (71) that mixes a plurality of droplets. With respect to Claims 6-10, applicants' claim an apparatus therefore it is fundamental that an apparatus claim define the structure of the invention and not what material, in this case cell or microbe as claimed in claims 6-10, the structure houses in carrying out the process. As long as the apparatus of '218 and Heller are capable dispensing a cell or microbe, the prior art apparatuses meet the requirements of the claimed feature. (Also see Ex parte Masham, In re Yanush, In re Finsterwalder and In re Casey)

'218 fails to teach a plurality of electrode units that are arranged under or on the substrate for operating a droplet to move or stop and a unit that applies an electric field to the electrode units so as to carry the droplet on the surface of the substrate.

Heller teaches an apparatus for the movement of droplets on electrode units (12) contained in a substrate and a unit (for example, 52) for applying an electric field to the electrode units (12). (See Figure 2B)

It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to provide the device of '218 with a plurality of electrode units that are arranged under or on the substrate for operating a droplet to move or stop and a unit that applies an electric field to the electrode units so as to carry the droplet on the surface of the substrate to achieve the predictable results of increasing control of droplet movement on the substrate and thus increasing the overall efficiency of the process.
